Biographical Note by The HistoryMakers®

Robert James Pickens was born on February 2, 1943 to Sarah Wilson and Nathaniel Pickens in Chicago, Illinois and grew up in Evanston, Illinois. After graduating from Evanston Township High School in 1962, Pickens was the first African American to represent America in wrestling in the 1964 Olympics. He placed sixth in the Greco-Roman division.

Continuing his career in sports, Pickens played football as an offensive tackle for the Chicago Bears from 1967 to 1969. He earned a B.S. in Business Administration from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln in 1969 and then spent a year playing for the Edmonton Eskimos in the Canadian Football League while working as the Assistant Personnel Director for Foote, Cone and Belding-an advertising agency. In 1970, he began an 18-year career with Sears, Roebuck and Company in which he was eventually promoted to toy department buyer.

In 1988, Pickens left Sears to become the owner and managing director of Rainbow Classics, Inc., a Hong Kong-based trading company dealing in toys and sundry items. In 1991, Pickens became the president and owner of Merrill Associates, Ltd. and the construction coordinator for DJP Development and Consulting, a family-owned business. In addition to his professional duties, Pickens began serving as a Chicago Park District commissioner in 2000.

Pickens never left sports behind: he served as an official for the Big 10 Football Conference between 1976 and 1989, and co-founded a mentoring group of retired professional athletes called Team Up, Inc. in 1985. He held the position of national steering committee president of the National Football League Players Association and president of the National Football League Retired Players Association's Chicago Chapter and worked with youth through the Better Boys Foundation and the Boys and Girls Clubs of America. Pickens had two adult children, and married Judith Jamison in 2002.

Pickens passed away on April 12, 2018 at age 75.

Series I: Original Interview Footage

Video Oral History Interview with Robert Pickens, Section A2002_089_001_001, TRT: 0:30:42 ?

Robert Pickens describes his family background and childhood. His mother, Sarah Stampley, was born on April 1, 1912 in Stampley Station, Mississippi to Rose Stampley and worked as a housekeeper. Stampley Station was a predominately black community where the whites had less political and economic power. Pickens' father, Nathaniel Pickens, was born around Birmingham, Alabama, and worked as a spring setter. When Pickens was four, his parents divorced and his mother, Sarah Stampley, married Robert Wilson. Pickens was born on February 2, 1943 in Chicago, Illinois and was raised in an all-black community in Evanston, Illinois. He remembers being bullied in school as well as his parents operating a honkey-tonk bar in their house. He attended Foster Elementary School, Haven Junior High School, and Evanston Township High School, where he excelled at sports including wrestling and football. He graduated from Evanston Township High School in 1962.

Robert Pickens describes his college years and his career as a professional athlete. After graduating from Evanston Township High School in 1962, Pickens enrolled at the University of Wisconsin in Madison where he played football. In 1964, Pickens left the University of Wisconsin and became a wrestler for the 1964 United States Olympic team in Tokyo, Japan. In Tokyo, Pickens placed sixth in the Greco-Roman division, the highest an American had ever placed and met other black athletes like HistoryMaker Willye White. After the Olympics, Pickens enrolled at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln, where he continued to play football and married his first wife, Doris Pickens, in 1967. In 1969, Pickens graduated from the University of Nebraska with a B.S. degree in business administration and played offensive tackle for the Chicago Bears for two years. After working for the advertising firm of Foote, Cone, and Belding in 1970, Pickens began his eighteen year career working at Sears Roebuck and Company.
