Dr. Hollis Underwood was born on October 29, 1957 in Chicago, Illinois to Jonetta Everette Crowe and Robert Crowe, Jr. After Underwood's maternal grandfather, John Everette, Sr., died in a steel mill accident, her maternal grandmother became a city switchboard operator, and joined the Democratic precinct committee in Gary, Indiana. She also raised Underwood's mother, who worked as nurse after completing her training at Chicago's Michael Reese Hospital and Medical Center. Underwood's father was the only child of Robert Crowe, Sr. and Flora Crowe. From the age of sixteen years old, Underwood's father studied math at Purdue University in West Lafayette, Indiana. He became a jazz pianist and math teacher. Underwood grew up with two brothers in a middle class neighborhood in Gary, where she attended Ernie Pyle Elementary School. While in the fifth grade, she lived with her aunt and uncle in St. Thomas in the U.S. Virgin Islands. Underwood also remembers Richard Hatcher, Gary's first black mayor.

Dr. Hollis Underwood attended Lutheran Parish School while living with her aunt and uncle in the U.S. Virgin Islands. Shortly after her return to Gary, Indiana in 1969, Underwood's father passed away. Her mother moved the family to Detroit, Michigan, where she taught at Wayne State University. At Detroit's Wilford L. Coffey Middle School, Underwood became interested in science, and aspired to become a doctor after working in the office of family friend, Dr. William L. Farmer. She graduated from Cass Technical High School alongside actor David Alan Grier, and studied zoology at the University of Maryland in College Park. She also pledged Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority there, and played tennis. Upon graduating in 1979, Underwood attended Meharry Medical College's summer program, but was unhappy with the culture. Instead, she enrolled at Howard University College of Medicine, where she was mentored by Dr. John Townsend, the director of internal medicine at Howard University Hospital.

Dr. Hollis Underwood was a community internal medicine resident and fellow at the Mayo Clinic School of Medicine in Rochester, Minnesota, where she met her husband, Dr. Paul Underwood, Jr. There were few female students, and Underwood's superiors did not support her. Rather than be discouraged, she studied the 'Physicians' Desk Reference' on her own. Upon completing her fellowship in general internal medicine, she worked at the Frederiksted Health Clinic in St. Croix in the U.S. Virgin Islands. While there, Underwood had three sons, Paul Underwood, III, Ian Underwood, and Neal Underwood; and her mother worked as a nursing director on the nearby islands of St. Thomas and St. John. In 1989, Hurricane Hugo devastated the U.S. Virgin Islands, and Underwood moved her family to Cleveland, Ohio, where her husband was assigned to complete a cardiology fellowship. In Cleveland, Underwood worked as a lead physician at Ohio Permanente Medical Group, Inc., and volunteered with the Templum House and Cleveland Women, Inc.
