Biographical Note by The HistoryMakers®

U.S. Army soldier Tyrone T. Dancy was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Dancy was drafted into the U.S. Army in 1969 and went on to serve in the Vietnam War with the 199th light infantry brigade. Following a brief tour of duty, Dancy returned to the United States and continued his education. He graduated from Pierce Junior College with his A.A. degree in arts and humanities and then enrolled at LaSalle University where he received his B.A. degree in sociology and psychology in 2005, and his M.A. degree in communications in 2007.

In April of 1977, Dancy began his career with the State Labor Department of Pennsylvania as a disabled veteran’s outreach program specialist. Throughout his twenty-five year career, he has provided employment assistance and guidance to thousands of veterans. In 1990, Dancy worked as a local veteran’s employment representative. He then served as a veteran’s program function supervisor for twelve years before retiring on November 22, 2002. Dancy also served for a short time as the chairperson of the Pennsylvania International Association of Personnel in Employment Security (IAPES) Veterans Committee as well as the vice chairperson of the IAPES National Veterans Committee.

Throughout the early 1990s, Dancy wrote a bi-weekly column entitled, “On Point” for the Philadelphia Leader. This led him to write and self-publish the book, Serving Under Adverse Conditions, which discloses the struggles of Vietnam veterans. Dancy went on to co-produce, “Letters from the Attic,” a play about African American war veterans. Dancy also serves as host and producer of the Veterans Hour Radio Program on WDAS-AM 1480 in Philadelphia.

Dancy has been honored by numerous civic organizations for his work on behalf of veterans. He received the Dean K. Phillips Award from the National Veterans Training Institute as well as an award from the National Office of Vietnam Veterans of America for his leadership in the passage of legislation for a Veterans Bill of Rights in the State of Pennsylvania. Dancy was presented with a Senatorial Citation in 1994 from Senator Allyson Y. Schwartz of Pennsylvania for his leadership on veterans issues. Dancy's military honors include the Bronze Star for Heroism with the "V" for Valor, the Purple Heart for wounds sustained in combat, the Vietnam Campaign Medal, the Army Commendation, the Meritorious Service Medal, the Army Good Conduct Medal, the National Defense Medal, the Vietnam Service Medal, and the Combat Infantry Badge.

Tyrone T. Dancy was interviewed by The HistoryMakers on 03/25/2013.

Video Oral History Interview with Tyrone T. Dancy, Section A2013_096_001_001, TRT: 1:28:44 ?

Tyrone Dancy describes his family background. Dancy's parents, Elaine Strayhorn and Leon Turner Dancy, were both born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania during the 1920s. His mother was a seamstress and his father served for twenty years in the U.S. Navy. Dancy's parents met while his father was on leave from the Navy. They had two children together but never married. Dancy's maternal grandparents, Lillian and John Strayhorn, were from North Carolina but moved to Philadelphia where they raised their family. Dancy's paternal grandmother was Marian Dancy. He did know his paternal grandfather because he died before Dancy was born. When Dancy's father died, his mother took another husband and had four children by him. Dancy describes his relationship with his younger siblings and shares his earliest childhood memory.

Tyrone Dancy describes his first combat mission in My Lai, Vietnam during the Vietnam War. While engaging in combat, Dancy was severely injured by a rocket attack. He explains that when the shrapnel from the exploding rocket hit him, the metal fragments covered almost the entire right side of his body--from head to toe. Dancy remained conscious through the entire ordeal and was transferred to various hospitals in Vietnam, Japan and the United States to recover. His injuries were extensive and caused bilateral hearing loss in his right ear. Dancy documents his injuries from the rocket attack and subsequent rehabilitation in the self-published book, "Serving Under Adverse Conditions".

Tyrone Dancy was assigned to clerical duty at Fort Devens in Massachusetts following his recovery from injuries sustained in the Vietnam War. However, he soon began to experience symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder. Dancy was medically discharged from the U.S. Army, after further evaluation of his condition showed he was no longer fit for duty. Dancy received several medals for his service during the Vietnam War, including the Bronze Star and Purple Heart. After being discharged from the U.S. Army, Dancy worked as a non-teaching assistant with the School Board of Philadelphia and at the VA Hospital in the Administration Department. He also obtained his associate degree from Pierce Junior College in Philadelphia.
